ESHKOL & JOHNSON

With The Jewish Accent

New York — When, on Saturday morning at the orthodox Spanish-Portuguese Synagogue, Israeli Premier Levi Eshkol stood before the open scroll of the Torah and recited the blessing, he had every reason to thank Heaven for a mission well accomplished. The members of his entourage, also present in this, the oldest synagogue in New York City, noted the relaxed expression of the Prime Minister, his face radiant with the peace of the Sabbath. They were reminded of the biblical passage relating to Menuhat Shabbat after six days of constant effort.

* * * *

I paid special attention to the Prime Minister during his address at the Waldorf-Astoria where he met with the leaders of North American Jewry. I noticed, particularly, the definite contrast between him and his predecessor, a contrast obvious to others too. Those who expected from the Prime Minister lofty phrases, sensational utterances, controversial slogans, were completely disappointed.

Definitely, Levi Eshkol is not interested in impressing people by any oratorical effects.

Among Jews who love rhetorical art and sometimes mistake a "beautiful speech" for action in the grand style, such disdain of polemics may not help the Israeli Prime Minister's popularity. But, as one of the State Department officials who accompanied the Premier, told me, Eshkol seems to be the first Jewish leader who doesn't like to make speeches. Another Israeli added that the Prime Minister wouldn't waste a minute standing in front of a mirror to rehearse a speech written by a ghost writer. His previous training as Minister of Finance has developed within him the businessman's contempt for anything irrelevant to facts. What he is tenaciously dedicated to is the proposition that a prime minister of a country is essentially an administrator of a great business, and not one given to prophetic or poetic verbiage — a fact which must have impressed Johnson who shares this attitude.

* * * *

Upon analyzing the effect of the Eshkol visit here, in the United States, one is impressed by the unexpected, diplomatic triumph of his mission.

The answer to why David Ben Gurion or Abba Eban never have succeeded in the past lies in Eshkol's appearance and — in what he says.

First, Eshkol destroyed the illusion which many Jews, especially the foreign-born, possess when they listen to a leader or a diplomat who speaks with an Oxford accent. And often these Jews wonder: why doesn't this diplomat — who speaks so beautifully and moves so profoundly an immigrant from a small town in Eastern Europe with his "pure English" — also impress the United Nations?

Oddly enough, I believe that Eshkol impressed with his Yiddish accent. And this typically Yiddish accent, coupled with his obvious, profound, Jewish sagacity, did the trick. Moreover, Eshkol made no effort to step into the shoes of a visionary or a poet.

* * * *

There is an old Hasidic story about a Rebbe who said: "When I appear before my Maker, I won't be asked, 'Zishe, why weren't you Moses?' I'll be asked, 'Were you Zishe?' "

* * * *

During his conferences with President Johnson and other American officials, and also at his many appearances before American Jewish audiences, Levi Eshkol was Prime Minister of Israel, a small nation in territory but great in its readiness to sacrifice everything for peace and justice. That is why he, and not his witty predecessor, was able to extract from the President of the United States a historic statement such as the commitment that Washington supports, without any qualifications, the integrity and independence of ALL countries in the Middle East and, also, that the U.S. along with Israel, is concerned for peace in this vital area. (Indirectly this was a blast at the ugly Soviet flirtation with Nasser, attacking Israel as an imperialist, belligerent power).

Since Eshkol is not one to display eloquence or dispense bons mots, he was extremely cautious and clever. He was prudent and realistic concerning even the problem of Russia. As a result, therefore, it is rumored that Johnson promised to discuss with Khrushchev the issue of removing the cold war tensions from the Middle East.

In typical Eshkolesque understatement — his businesslike manner — Eshkol declared about Russia:

● I'm inclined to believe that the Soviet Union is not interested in harming Israel or in her disappearance.

According to diplomatic experts, this tactful answer may help the President of the United States to convince Russia that United States-Soviet cooperation requires the diminishing of friction in an area where the U.S. wants peace.

* * * *

The sum total of Eshkol's visit to the United States is clear. Despite anything said in the past, despite waverings, hesitations and suspicions, for the first time since Truman's recognition of Israel a great president, Lyndon B. Johnson clarified Washington's position vis-à-vis the Jewish state. And if Moscow really desires peace and friendship with Washington, it will learn this lesson quickly: the United States stands with Israel AND with the Arabs; it desires prosperity for both the Jews and the Arabs.

This is what the Israelis want in essence. They are dedicated to but one dream: that the convulsions in the Middle East cease, that prosperity and amity come in their place.

JAMES WALKER, M.P. MILTON KLEIN, M.P.

The Klein-Walker bill, which proposes amending the Canadian Criminal Code to include incitement to genocide as an indictable offence, will likely be debated in the House of Commons this month. Mr. Klein said he thinks a thorough airing of the whole hate problem is probable.

Toronto Hebrew Teachers Protest Salary Freeze

The Toronto Hebrew Teachers Alliance has openly challenged the leadership of the Toronto Jewish Community to end the present low ceiling on Hebrew teachers' salaries allegedly caused by a Welfare Fund freeze on all 1964-65 allocations.

The teachers' group, headed by President E. Munk, point to the growing disparity between salary scales of Hebrew teachers and those of public school teachers. While the Welfare Fund has included Hebrew teachers' salary scales in the freeze, it at the same time continues to subsidize the general studies department of the community high schools where no such freeze is in force, the teachers claim.

Mr. Munk made it clear that by including Hebrew teachers' salaries in the general freeze of Welfare Fund allocations it reduces those salaries to the status of handouts rather than payment for services rendered.

To the claim of the United Jewish Welfare Fund that the freeze has been caused by the simple shortage of funds, the Teachers Alliance replies by citing instances of new projects which, "however laudable", consume funds.

The Teachers Alliance predicts that if its present protest goes unheeded, the best teachers will gradually leave for other positions where salaries are not frozen and that the performance of those teachers who remain will drop.

Voices Hope For Israeli-Arab Peace

LONDON (JCNS) — Hope for a reconciliation between Jews and Arabs both inside and outside Israel has been voiced here by Archbishop Georges Hakim the Egyptian-born spiritual head of the Greek Catholic Church in the Jewish State.

On arrival here he told a JCNS reporter: "We hope that in time the Jewish and Arab communities will come together in friendship both within Israel and generally."

Asked whether this sentiment was shared by other Christian bishops and religious leaders in Arab States, he replied: "Everyone is for peace, for peace with justice. On peace we are all agreed: but it is on what is justice that the difficulty arises between us and them."

Archbishop Hakim, who is 58, left for the Lebanon at the outbreak of Israel's War of Independence. but shortly afterwards asked for — and was granted — permission to return. His community — the Greek Catholic Melchite — is numerically the strongest Christian denomination in Israel, comprising over 22,000 of the country's 55.000 Christians.

Proudly showing his red Histadrut membership card (he joined last month), Archbishop Hakim said that he must be the only ecclesiastical head to belong to a trade union movement, if not in the whole world, at least in the whole of the Middle East. "The acceptance of Arabs into the Histadrut will give a great deal to our people, who will now enjoy the same rights as other workers in Israel. I want my priests and nuns to join as well", he added.

Archbishop Hakim described his visits to Italy, Belgium and Britain as "semi-private", even though he had already met and would be meeting a number of religious leaders. His only official engagement was to attend the international convention in the United States of the Melchite denomination whose followers number some 400,000.

Britain Eyes Israeli Arms Buying

LONDON, (CJN) — The London Daily Telegraph reports:

British arms firms are keeping a close eye on the Israeli Prime Minister's visit to President Johnson.

Mr. Eshkol, who fought in the British Army during the 1914-18 war, still relies on our warships and armour, but France has equipped his Air Force and American firms are now pressing hard.

Should he ask Mr. Johnson to redress the supply of Soviet weapons to Egypt, there is some danger that we may be pushed aside.

No swift change in equipment is likely, though, and Vickers-Armstrongs still hope Israel will buy their "pocket" version of the Chieftain tank.

Her Majesty's Mail Fouled Again

NAZIS DEFY OTTAWA

Hate mailings from Scarboro continue

Clamour For Anti-Hate Legislation Mounting

Canada's hatemongers have either issued an impertinent "dare" to the Ontario Attorney General's office to prosecute them — or else they have overreached themselves and have played into the hands of the RCMP.

On the very day last week (Friday) that Justice Minister Guy Favreau announced in parliament his decision to instruct the RCMP to cooperate with the Ontario Attorney General's office in bringing the haters to heel, Canadians received a new broadside of race poison in their mail boxes — a fantastic sheet of lies and distortions headlined "Communism is Jewish".

The new hate sheet was mailed from Scarborough but was published by "World Service", P.O. Box 3848, Fairview Station, Birmingham, Alabama.

Because the Favreau decision, announced almost by accident in the House following a question by Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker, was published in The Canadian Jewish News two days before it appeared in the general press, it is possible that the hate mongers read it in this paper that day (Wednesday) and promptly fouled Her Majesty's mails with their poison. That would have been an act of catch-us-if-you-can defiance of the Ontario Attorney General's office, the authority that must do any criminal prosecuting.

FRESH EVIDENCE

On the other hand, because the "Communism is Jewish" hate leaflet provides fresh evidence of anti-Jewish slander, which is what the RCMP are now hot on the trail in search of, the hatemongers may have slipped up this time. When they read the Favreau announcement in the general press it was too late. They had already dumped their poison into the mails.

There can be no doubt that "Communism is Jewish" is a deliberate and twisted attempt to deceive and mislead — in the most repulsive way too. It literally teems with items of deliberate hate-mongering. For instance, a photo of a row of corpses lying on the ground, obviously massacred. The caption reads: "Wherever communists have come to power, their first act has been to execute or imprison the nation's leader class. Their second act is to install Jews in every position of power and authority.. In Russia literally millions of gentiles were butchered by Jew executioners".

Not a shred of proof is offered of the identity of the corpses, but the crude implication is clearly that they were slaughtered by Jews lusting for gentile blood — the old lie dating from the Middle Ages.

PATHETIC EFFORT

The Attorney General's office is now studying this leaflet carefully. And though obtaining evidence from it likely to lead to a conviction under the present Criminal Code remains a tricky matter, the leaflet's pathetic struggles to prove its weird point make nonsense of its pretence at being factual. Any normal adult can see it is a barefaced attempt to mislead the gullible and inflame the sore-heads of society against the Jews.

Even though "Communism is Jewish" claims to be published "in the public interest", inconsistencies of reasoning do not bother its compilers. One item is a reprint of a newspaper report, datelined Moscow, announcing the appointment of Veniamin Dymshits as head of the Council of the People's Economy. This is, of course, presented to support the idea that the Jews are the masterminds of Soviet Communism and therefore the enslavers of the Russian gentiles. But the report itself says: "He is the first Jew to reach such heights since Lazar Kaganovitch held his post in the Kremlin leadership".

It adds up to vicious and deliberate deception, with the aim of creating totally unfounded fears in neutral readers ad provoking dangerous and violent hatreds in the mentally unbalanced.

And here lies a definite possibility that the "Communism is Jewish" hate leaflet could qualify its Canadian distributors for prosecution under Section 306 of the Criminal Code — provided a certain "if" is removed by amendment, an "if" that confines criminal deception to commercial relations and stops it from including human relations.

Section 306 has to do with "publication of false advertisements" and reads as follows:

"Everyone who publishes or causes to be published an advertisement containing a statement that purports to be a statement of fact but is untrue, deceptive or misleading or is intentionally so worded or arranged that it is deceptive or misleading, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for five years, if the advertisement is published (a) to promote, directly or indirectly, the sale or disposal of property or any interest therein, or (b) to promote a business or commercial interest".

KLEIN-WALKER BILL

This, plus many other aspects of the Criminal Code's provisions and shortcomings in dealing with the present outbreak of hatemongering, will likely get a thorough airing in the House of Commons before the month is out. The Klein-Walker bill, proposing an amendment to include incitement to genocide as an indictable offence, is due to get second reading any day now. At that time, Mr. Klein told The Canadian Jewish News, the hope is that Parliament will debate the matter fully.

DENY U. S. GOVERNMENT PRESSURE

New York, (JCNS) — Both the State Department and the Treasury have denied reports that the American Government had virtually forced through a $40 million loan to Egypt by the International Monetary Fund.

America's vote is decisive in that body and the reports had stated that her Western allies had been dismayed at the American action in imposing her will and compelling the I.M.F. to grant what was considered a politically motivated loan.

The State Department denied that political motives had been injected, while the United States Treasury said that the loan was "subject to the fulfilment of a series of financial undertakings" given to the I.M.F. by Egypt. The Treasury statement concluded: "The loan was in no sense instigated or forced through by the United States."

HUMAN RELATIONS

Marriage or Job

DR. ROSE N. FRANZBLAU

QUESTION: I have been a widow for many years and am in my early forties. I hold an executive position in a tremendous organization.

Recently I met a bachelor in his early fifties who is quite comfortable financially. He has asked me to marry him.

He is a very sincere and kind person, but I find that I am superior to him mentally. I do not find his company terribly stimulating, although he is a very fine person.

ANSWER: This is probably not the first offer of marriage that you have had since you became a widow. With the high executive position you attained, absorbing your time and energy and giving you the status you wanted, you may not have felt it necessary to marry and build a home life of your own. Basically, however, when a job can take the place of love, then the person really does not want to be married.

If a woman finds and fulfills herself in her work, after having been widowed, she may see a second husband as a hindrance or handicap. She may then hesitate to return once more to the role of a dependent female, who is told what to do and how to behave by the chief executive in the household, the husband.

Some women remain faithful to the image of their departed husband through feelings of guilt for not having been a very good mate and punish themselves by emotional deprivation. Others, not having been very happy in the first marriage, feel they do not want to make a second mistake. In other cases, retrospective evaluation of the deceased person and the relationship that existed between them leads to an overly glorified and emotionally falsified picture of him, which is then enshrined by the widow, who never remarries.

The fact that you feel superior to this man mentally has not been of much concern in establishing your relationship or bringing it to the point where you would even consider accepting his proposal.

You may feel that alone, in the privacy of your own home, it would be nice to have him as a companion. But what may worry you is that your colleagues and fellow executives at work might consider him beneath you. You would then lose status with them because you chose a man who is not your equal.

If you are considering marriage to him because you feel that the years are catching up with you and that you may never get another proposal if you don't accept this one, then the offer should give you pause.

Although you may be superior in some areas, however, this man undoubtedly has his own areas of competence. Because his interests are different from yours does not necessarily make them inferior. Once you begin to see and appreciate what he has to offer, there is a good chance that you would find him more stimulating than you do now.

Each of you has waited quite a while before considering marriage or remarriage. The psychological reasons for your hesitations and postponements may still be operating. Genuine readiness for marriage is a positive force in helping a person to make a good choice. You should not feel rushed in making your decision about accepting his offer. Give yourselves time to know each other better. As you begin to show an interest in his activities, you may find him much more knowledgeable and stimulating than you now do. Having waited so long, you can give yourself more time. It is still very early.

Women Demand Legislation Against Hate Propaganda

Stronger legislative safeguards against displays of racial and religious hatred were urged on the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice by the board of directors of the National Council of Jewish Women of Canada at their recent annual meeting in Toronto.

The special statement which reiterated a formal resolution adopted by the National Council a year ago, was forwarded to Messrs Pearson and Favreau in view of what was termed "the current barrage of pernicious propaganda" that had reached proportions never before witnessed in Canada.

"There is apparently no means in law," the statement declared, "to cope with this incitement and propaganda, and we therefore feel it is vital that amendments be introduced during the current session to existing provisions of the Canadian Criminal Code, these amendments to provide stronger safeguards against situations of racial discrimination and religious intolerance while continuing to respect the fundamental rights of the individual."

HEAL SPLIT IN FRENCH COMMUNITY

Marseilles, (JCNS) — Several years of communal strife in Marseilles appear to have been brought to an end by an agreement just signed between representatives of the old-time community and those of the newer arrivals from North Africa.

The long-time Jewish residents of Marseilles resented the newcomers from Tunisia, Morocco and Algeria, while they, for their part, objected to the entrenched communal office-holders of the old community. The result was a proliferation of opposing synagogues, kashrut supervisory bodies, burial arrangements and other communal activities.

The agreement was reached after a second visit here by Baron Elie de Rothschild and M. André Weill, who both represent the Marseilles community on the Consistoire Central. M. Sylvio Benveniste, President of the Marseilles board of the Fonds Social Juif Unifiè (the central fund-raising and distributing body of French Jewry) presented a plan for the reconstruction of communal life in the port city.

The plan, which was adopted, sets up a six-member committee, three for the old-time community and three for the new-comers, who are grouped in the "Communautè Israèlite Sèpharadite", to handle all communal and religiouh affairs under Rabbi Israel Salzer, the Chief Rabbi of Marseilles. Any dispute that may arise will go to Baron Elie de Rothschild and M. Sylvio Benveniste for arbitration.

M. Abraham, President of the community and Dr. Rene Wolf signed the agreement on behalf of the community, and Maitre Charles Haddad, Dr. Levy and M. Moïse Djaoui for the Communaute Israelite Sepharadite.

TORONTO HEBREW TEACHERS PROTEST

During recent negotiations with the Bureau of Jewish Education and its lay leaders as represented by the Personnel Committee, Hebrew teachers have felt rebuffed to the extent that we wish to acquaint the Toronto Jewish community with the issues involved:

1. Efforts to reverse the continuing trend of growing salary disparity between Hebrew teachers and Public School teachers are being resisted by the Bureau.

Despite ample statistical proof of the widening margin of underpayment of Hebrew teachers — we are told that the Welfare Fund will freeze all 1964-65 allocations. We challenge the justice and need for this measure as applied to salaries of Hebrew teachers.

A. Teachers' salaries are not handouts, or to be classified as such — as might be the case with allocations to welfare agencies.

B. The same Welfare Fund has recently agreed to subsidize general studies department of the Community High Schools. Are these general studies teachers' salaries subject to similar freezes and Bureau supervision? Or are these teachers being hired at the going rate to obtain the finest staff available?

C. Who can expect a Hebrew teacher who is openly classified as inferior to his counterpart in the general studies department to do his best?

D. Does the Welfare Fund hire its staff at going rates in open competition or do they use a code of salaries based on the idealism expected of its employees?

E. When the community spends $19,000 a year to train teachers only a small fraction of whom serve Toronto's Jewish community's subsidized schools, are these funds not wasted — unless teachers so graduated are offered salaries that make teaching as a career attractive?

Has a community the right to embark on new projects — however laudable — when this same community pleads inability to adequately support existing commitments?

G. We claim that as Hebrew teachers' salaries are derived at least in substantial part by parents' tuition fees, there is no justification to treat our salaries as if they were derived solely from UJA contributions.

H. If a community during years of prosperity claims inability to accede to requests which have been admitted to be just and fair — what level of security and advancement may be in store for Hebrew teachers when the economy pauses or regresses?

I. When the need for an intensive Jewish education was recognized only by a small section of the community, it was regrettable but understandable that salaries were below par — now that Jewish education is recognized as important by the lay leadership of the community, why do our salaries compare even less favorably than before, with our counterparts in public schools?

UNLESS THE COMMUNITY LEADERS WILL RECONSIDER THEIR STAND ON THIS MATTER, WE PREDICT:

1. Our best teachers will gradually leave the city accepting positions in schools not hampered by Bureau rules on frozen salaries.

2. New graduates trained at our community's expense — if interested in a career — will accept positions elsewhere.

3. A sense of frustration among teachers will be reflected in their performing at less than their best ability.

A MACABRE, CRUEL REMEMBRANCE

RJF—WHAT IS IT?

This issue of The Canadian Jewish News contains an advertisement asking Hungarian and Czechoslovakian Jews to participate this coming Sunday in a ceremony at Toronto's Bathurst Lawn Cemetery, the likes of which have never been witnessed in this country. During the unveiling of a monument honoring the victims of German cruelty, RJF soap will be interred.

To the puzzled reader, these initials may seem to be a printer's error; unfortunately, for our generation and for humanity of all time, the letters, RJF, are not a lapsus lingua. They stand for the cruelest invention of the Nazi murderers. They read, in the original German: Reinjuedisches Fet. The translation is unbelievable, but true. It connotes soap made from the pure fat of the bodies of murdered human beings.

Many wonder why men such as Dr. Mengele, who was arrested last week in South America, and other monsters who worked for the German war machine still are hunted. Some say, let bygones be by-gones.

The ceremony for the interment of a bar of RJF soap here should remind all, too sensitive to look back into recent history, that there are things of the past which cannot be forgotten. This ceremony is as macabre as can be; but so is the reality of the concentration camp world.

Such remembrances are an integral part of the chronicles of humanity, of what happened. They are part of history, always to be remembered.

GETTING TOUGH WITH ARABS

LEAF FROM DE GAULLE'S BOOK

The 26th regional convention of the Zionist Organization of Canada, Central Region, will discuss, among other issues, the problem of the Arab boycott. We consider this problem the foremost concern not only of Zionists but of all who are interested in promoting good will among nations and in reducing international frictions and tensions.

The Toronto Telegram deserves to be commended for bringing this problem, nay, this threat to world commerce, to the attention of the Canadian public. The Telegram editorial was inspired by the new Lord Mancroft affair in England where two companies with which Lord Mancroft was associated were placed on the Arab boycott list. Rightly the Telegram demands that "the time has come to get tough" with the Arab dictators.

Analyzing the Arab game vis-a-vis Israel, one should remember General De Gaulle, who has served as an example of how to deal with the Arab adventurers. Time and again the French president impressed upon the Arab leaders that his government would not be blackmailed into diminishing its support to Israel. Finally it was the Arabs, not De Gaulle, who reopened negotiations with the intention of doing business with France.

Now the Arabs choose to ignore France's close cooperation with Israel.

Last week another example of toughness concerning the Arabs was shown by Johnson, who slowly is emerging as one of the great American presidents.

When Arab ambassadors dared state that Israeli Premier Eshkol's visit would harm Arab-U.S.A. relations, the State Department summoned them for a lecture on international behavior. Nothing was heard from them since.

Johnson proved that the Arabs would continue to accept baksheesh wherever handed out, regardless of the attitude towards Israel by the respective country.

A firm, stiff attitude, pointing out to these adventurers that no civilized nation would bury one people for the pleasure of another, certainly should contribute in clearing the atmosphere and accelerating the trend towards peace in the Middle East. For only lunatics or readers of Bagdhad tales would assume for one moment that an attack against Israel could terminate in any way but a world conflagration.

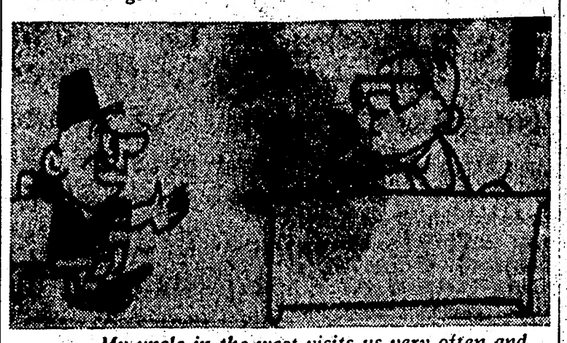
The Arabs, or rather, those who rule them by force, are emulating Hitler's manoeuvers regarding Jews. They insinuate that everything would be honky-dorey, if only their friends ceased dealing with Israel. All they demand as a prize for friendship is the isolation of Israel.

Boycott is economic warfare. And if Canadians receive threats from the Arab boycott bureau, this is economic warfare conducted in Canada against Canadian citizens. In this country there is no such thing as a Jewish business or a Jewish factory. There is a factory owned by one who may be Jewish or Bahai; but the enterprise benefits the Canadian economy. Any embassy organizing a boycott against such a firm undermines a Canadian business.

If the forthcoming Zionist convention devotes time and effort to organize a movement for counteracting this Arab threat, it will have done a service not only to the Jewish community but to the economy of this country, upon which we all depend.

DIAGNOSIS by DOSH

— My name is Ahmed. You don't have to examine me, doctor, because I'm as healthy as a horse. I just came to your office, in order to see what a psychiatrist looks like! Not only am I healthy, but my big brother, — he's called Gamal — tells me all the time, that I am the best guy in the area:- that I am handsome, clever, and brave! I must believe him, because he is not the only one, who tells me such things!



— My uncle in the west visits us very often and always says how wonderful I am. He tells me I am strong, educated, wise and that there is no one quite like me. Also he brings me marvellous presents. I have lots of other admirers. My pal Nikita, for example, the one who came around lately. He is a very bright guy and one can trust him. He said that he has never met such a wonderful person like me! And he brought me lots and lots of presents as well!

What's that you say, Doctor?! That all these characters only confuse me? That they're all lying to me, so as to make me like them and exploit me?! That they are concealing the truth from me? That I myself know, deep in my heart, that I'm not so strong, handsome and clever? And because of this I keep having funny pains, dizziness, attacks of anger and hatred and a feeling of insecurity? That I must understand that these pals are doing me a great wrong? And that I shouldn't listen to them? And that I must get well and take things easy and I must study and work? And then, and then only will I really be big and strong and wise?!

(To our deepest regret, this story is utterly imaginary. Ahmed never went to the doctor, nobody bothered to tell him the truth, all his friends continued to lie to him and accordingly he remained a poor, mixed-up child, causing lots of trouble to himself and to others ...)

NEHRU AND THE JEWS

Despite the hostile attitude of the late Jawaharlal Nehru to Israel and his overt pro-Arab policy, Israeli President Shazar immediately cabled his condolences to the Indian President in New Delhi upon learning of the death of the Indian Premier, according to a Jewish Chronicle News Service report.

Israeli Premier Levi Eshkol likewise sent his condolences to the Indian Acting Prime Minister. Government and private buildings in Israel were instructed to fly flags at half mast the following day. The Indian soccer team, due to meet a Korean team for the Asian cup final at Haifa on the afternoon of Mr. Nehru's death, decided to play the match after observing two minutes' silence. Flags flew at half-mast in the Haifa stadium. Radio Kol Israel broadcast a commemorative program.

The late Premier's attitude to the Indian Jewish community was friendly and the Jews in that country continue to enjoy full rights of citizenship. There is an Israeli consulate in Bombay, established in 1952. Mr. Nehru's government extended both de jure and de facto recognition to the State of Israel in September, 1950.

Hebrew day schools flourish in South Africa

By HENRY KATZEW

Jewish education is booming in South Africa and Rhodesia, where a community of 120,000 has established 16 day schools and a Hebrew teacher's seminary during the last 15 years. The schools are attended by no fewer than 14,000 children.

In Johannesburg, the enrolment at the first King David Primary School (there are two) in 1963 was 920. It is now over 1,000. There is a waiting list until 1970, and the principal of the school, Dr. A. Beron, reports that the enrolment next year "will no doubt make the school the largest of its kind in the world".

There are primary schools in Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban, Port Elizabeth, Pretoria, Bulawayo and Salisbury. There are newly emergent secondary schools in Johannesburg, Durban and Pretoria. All of them, together with the afternoon schools (Hebrew classes), come under one of the two Boards of Jewish Education.

The South African Board of Jewish Education, the larger body, is responsible for the Transvaal, Natal, Orange Free State, Eastern Cape Province and Southern Rhodesia. The Cape Board of Jewish Education deals with the Western Cape and South-West Africa.

Hebrew teachers receive their training at the Rabbi Yehuda Leib Zlotnik Seminary in Johannesburg, established in 1949. The Lithuanian-born generation is now giving way to young South African-born teachers, mostly young women, though the number of men in the profession is increasing.

As for the teaching of English, young Jews and Jewesses in this city are literally flocking into the teaching profession. There are two reasons for this: salary scales have been raised and teaching now has a higher status, and there is a strong, idealistic urge to improve the teaching of English from the low level to which it has fallen in many schools during recent years.

Why did the teaching of English fall so low? Chiefly because English South Africans have slowly been drifting away from teaching to industry, commerce and other occupations, a trend that has been apparent for the last 20 or 30 years.

To replace them, many schools were forced to take on Afrikaans-speaking teachers, ill equipped to teach English. The press, educationalists and parents were horrified at the spelling and grammar of pupils. They were also highly critical of the standards of the teachers.

An organisation came into being to "save the English language", and English school principals were urged to persuade promising English-speaking students to take up teaching the language. The response was small until the new salary scales were announced.

This year the College of Education in Johannesburg, which trains teachers, had a record number of enrolments, very many of them Jewish. If the trend continues — and it is expected to — the next few years are likely to see more Jewish teachers in the English-language schools here than ever before.

Max Brod: lively octogenarian

AT lunch-time in Tel Aviv one can often see at the Rishon Cellar a small man with shrewd sparkling eyes and large glasses, full of indomitable energy, discussing literature and theatre and life in general.

Nobody would think that this man, the poet Max Brod, dramatic adviser to the Habima, was an octogenarian. In fact he was 80 on Wednesday.

Not unlike other prominent Jews of this age, Brod's life is divided into several very different chapters. On March 14, 1938, he and his lifelong friend, the philosopher Felix Weltsch (his junior by four months), together with their wives, left Prague by the night train to Cracow on their journey to Palestine.

The following morning they were puzzled by German soldiers with swastikas and bayonets occupying intermediate Czech stations. They realised that that very night Hitler's army had seized the nominally independent part of Czechoslovakia. Hours of extreme anxiety followed until, in the still prevailing confusion, the train finally crossed the Polish frontier.

Brod and Weltsch were part of a trio of almost inseparable friends. The third, who was spared the ordeal of Nazism as he died 14 years earlier, was to become the most famous of all — Franz Kafka.

In English-speaking countries, Max Brod is perhaps primarily known because of his close association with Kafka and as editor and commentator of his writings. Of Brod's own numerous books, only a few have been translated. One is his biography of Heinrich Heine, which gives a new evaluation of the great German Jewish poet.

When Brod was born in Prague, the city was an Austrian provincial capital in which the majority of Jews lived in their own sphere of liberal German culture. It was an enclave — but no "ghetto" — within the Czech peasant country.

Young Jews from middle-class families such as Brod or Kafka came from were educated in German-language grammar schools and universities, but they acquired a vivid sense of national differences and of the good and bad sides of nationalism.

The average Czech did not like the Jews, and the majority of German students, mostly from the Sudetenland, were fiercely antisemitic. At the time of the First World War Brod was converted to Zionism, to which he has remained loyal, through various phases, until today, when he is a prominent and respected Israeli citizen.

But Brod has never been a nationalist in the narrow sense. Nationalism was discredited after the First World War, and Brod spent much effort to find a formula to make Jewish nationalism palatable. He was convinced that the real task of modern man — and indeed a sort of mission for the Jews — was the evolution of a new kind of nationalism which did not dissociate itself from the whole of humanity.

Among Brod's poems of the first period (published in 1917 under the title "The Promised Land") was one entitled "Hebrew Lesson." It begins:

"Thirty years I have grown up
Before I started to learn the language of my people.
I felt as though I had been deaf for thirty years."

Many years later, after his arrival in Palestine, Brod had to give a public lecture together with Habima star Hana Rovina. Afterwards Rovina told him: "Your lecture was excellent, your Hebrew is beautiful, but it was disturbing that in reading your paper your eyes moved from left to right." The truth was that Brod had written the Hebrew text in Latin characters!

Ukrainian-Jewish relations — mixture of joy and sadness

Dear Editor:

I was moved and pleased by the friendly tone of an article written by the Ukranian Canadian entitled, Ukranian and Jews, (Must We Be Enemies?), in the May 22nd issue of The Canadian Jewish News.

However, my tears of joy changed into tears of chagrin because of a pamphlet received in the mail, published April, 1964, concerning a hate book against the Jews.

I shoud like Mr. Boyko to first convince his fellow-men of the significance of peace, instead of trying to convince the Jews and have them forget what happened only twenty years ago. Certain statements are not true because the Ukranian militia serving the Nazi's was not a forced organization but voluntary, and the mass murders were done by those volunteers.

Ukrainians censure anti-Semitic book

Dear Editor:

We were pleased to see the article, Ukranians and Jews, (Must We Be Enemies?), in the May 22nd issue of The Canadian Jewish News.

As was indicated, we feel the time is ripe for constructive work for the present and future.

Unfortunately, at the same time our leaders and representatives of organized communities in the free world are attempting to establish the best possible relations between Ukranians and Jews, some individuals still are trying to destroy the good relationship.

One such person is Walter Nemylewsky. Recently he again printed a book in Ukrainian with comments that are not favorable to the Jews. This book was brought to our attention on May 14th. Our executive committee held an emergency meeting; the unanimous result was to condemn the book.

Our resolution was not published, since we felt that by doing so we should be advertising his book. We submitted the resolution to our headquarters in Winnipeg, advising that they send the information to the Jewish Congress, explaining the author had a history of mental illness.

We wish to emphasize that not too long ago he had printed another book, also in Ukrainian. The subject matter dealt with the activities of Ukrainian leaders, which, again, was not in the best interests of the Ukrainian community.

Once more, thank you for your understanding of the problems that face us. Our mutual vision for a future of the best possible relations truly will become a reality through this common understanding.

Toronto JOSEPH BOYKO, LL.D.
President, Ukrainian Canadian Committee

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

DEMAGOGUES AND DEMOCRATS

The Bible is not only a sacred text-book of religion and ethics, and not only a source book of ancient history. It is proving today a reliable guide to Israel's mineral deposits, and its military schools learn much from the old campaigns described there on the use of Israel's terrain and the deployment of forces upon it. It might also provide useful material for a seminar on political science and the art of influencing the masses.

Nowhere is this more clearly seen than in the career of Korah, arch-demagogue and classic exponent of subversion.

To his followers, and to many of the people who heard him, Korah must have appeared as a courageous figure, struggling gallantly against dictatorship and undue privilege. We can see them nodding their heads in approval when he challenges the authority of Moses and Aaron with the democratic statement: "Yet take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, and the Lord is in their midst."

It is the old technique of subversive talk that parades in the pious pretence of upholding the people's rights, and the promise of advantages to be had in a change of government.

The Torah tells us that God caused the earth to swallow up Korah and his followers, to show that there is no future in this kind of irresponsible attack on established authority.

Yet the unceremonious crushing of the Korah revolt does not rule out the sincerely motivated protest. Judaism teaches that differences of opinion are not only permissible but necessary for the health of the social organism.

It could not be otherwise in a tradition that sees Abraham, its founder, challenge the justice of God himself: "Shall the Lord of all the earth not execute judgment?" It is in keeping with that same tradition that Jeremiah and Job ask their searching questions, demand that God justify His ways with man, and yet retain their place among the sacred books of the Bible. The Talmud faithfully records the disputes in Jewish law of the schools of Hillel and Shammai, and concludes that the opinions of "these and these were the words of the Living God."

And what is the remarkable "Dudele" composed by that passionate defender of his people, the saintly Chasidic Rabbi of Berdichev, who arraigns God for the sufferings that He permits to be heaped on the Jewish people: "I, Levi Yitzchak, son of Sarah of Berdichev, say, 'Let there be an end to those sufferings'."

It is in that spirit, too, that the individual Jew acquired in Jewish communities the right to stop the services in the synagogue until he extracted from the leaders the promise that his grievance would be heard without delay.

And perhaps this was the meaning in that strange and unexpected sequel to the Korah story, when God commands Moses to have the fire-pans, used by the two hundred and fifty dissidents, beaten into a covering for the altar.

It was as if to say: This rebellion was negative and destructive. Let future generations beware of such self-seeking rebels. But the attitude of critical appraisal of the stewardship of those in authority is indispensable to a mature people and a free community. For the supreme test of any great man, or any great ideal, is integrity.

DR. PLAUT RECEIVES HONORARY DOCTORATE

Cincinnati (CJN). — W. Gunther Plaut, senior rabbi of Toronto's Holy Blossom Temple, was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity at ordination ceremonies of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, America's Seminary of Reform Judaism, last Saturday, June 6th. Dr. Nelson Glueck, president of the College-Institute, conferred the degree at the Rockdale Avenue Temple.

Rabbi Plaut, educated at the Universities of Heidelberg and Berlin, and a recipient of the degree of Doctor of Jurisprudence in International Law from the latter in 1934, was ordained by the College-Institute in 1939. Before coming to his present post in Toronto, he served as rabbi of Oak Park Temple, Chicago, Ill., and Mt. Zion Hebrew Congregation, St. Paul, Minn. During three years of World War II, he served as Chaplain in the U. S. Army and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

Rabbi Plaut's activities have ranged over many areas, from political life to the arts, from Zionist work to scholarship. In Chicago he was a leader in the Zionist movement. It St. Paul he headed the Zionist Emergency council for Minnesota for many years and was chairman of the Twin Cities Committee on Middle Eastern and International Affairs.

Among the Rabbi's activities are: chairman of the Toronto Zionists Public Relations Committee; past president of the St. Paul Gallery and School of Art; former chairman of the Governor's Committee on Ethics in Government; past president of the Minnesota Rabbinical Association; former chairman of the Toronto Rabbinical Fellowship for Community Affairs; national vice president of the World Federalists of Canada; chairman of public relations of the Zionist Organization of Canada, Central Region.

ISRAEL AT MONTREAL FAIR

The ministerial committee for Economic Affairs of the Israeli cabinet has accepted Canada's invitation to participate in the Montreal World's Fair of 1967, it was made known by the Israeli ambassador in Ottawa.

The committee already has instructed the implementation of the first steps for the planning of the construction of the Israeli Pavilion at the World's Fair site at Ste. Helen's Island. Mr. Jacob Yanai of the Prime Minister's office, who heads the International Fairs department in Jerusalem and who managed Israel's Pavilion in Brussels, has been appointed manager of Israel's Pavilion in Montreal, where he is due to arrive shortly.

IRISH GIRL IS UNITED NATIONS' HEBREW GUIDE

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (CJN) — Few visitors from Israel who tour the United Nations with Peggy Wiley can resist putting the question, "You're Irish but how is it you speak Hebrew?"

UN HEBREW SPEAKING GUIDE
Irish, blue eyed Peggy Wiley

The 23-year-old Miss Wiley still enjoys their astonishment.

According to the N.Y. Times, Miss Wiley has been the guide corps' Hebrew expert since she arrived 14 months ago, fresh from an Israeli Kibbutz south of Haifa.

Born in Kansas, she reached Israel via the University of Colorado. At college, an Israeli-born student sparked her interest in the pioneer farm settlements. But the Middle East long had been of special interest to her.

"I had always wanted to travel but I had never been east of Kansas." says Miss Wiley. 'I wanted to see the world — the real world."

She adds, with a smile, "I guess the choice was more emotional than logical."

Life in the Kibbutz was rewarding, she says She learned to do tree grafting in the citrus orchards and also went to school to learn Hebrew. She speaks the language fluently but totes around a five-pound dictionary to help her with the Hebrew books she reads in leisure hours.

GROSSINGERS NEW BUILDING

The eight-story guest building at the Grossinger Country Club, Grossinger, N. Y., ready for occupancy by July 4th weekend, will be named the Jennie G in honor of Jennie Grossinger, the "first lady of the Catskills", who came to the mountaine 50 years ago with her parents and husband.

Mrs. Grossinger and her family started the resort in 1914 with a little farmhous. Through the years, they added buildings and facilities; until today, the resort covers more than 1,000 acres and has nearly 50 buildings along with every convenience for vacationers, including a championship golf course, all-weaher tennis courts, indoor and outdoor swimming pools, a night club with four dance bands, theater, health clubs, and many other facilities. However the most important feature of Grossinger's is an intangible one — the warmth and hospitality developed as a result of a half-century's experience.

The new building is symbolic of the progress of Grossinger's. Whereas the original farmhouse, which had seven rooms, did not have running water electricity, or any other facilities, an dall the conveniences were outside the house, the Jennie G will have 98 luxurious guest rooms, each with TV and FM, private bath, dressing alcove, extra lavarotry, walk-in closets, picture windows, and other features.

CANADIAN IN BIBLE CONTEST

A Canadian will be among the representatives of thirty countries to participate at the Third International Bible Contest to be held in Jerusalem on September 24th, under the auspices of the Israeli Government and "Kol-Ysrael", Israel's National Radio Broadcasting Service.

The Israeli Consul General of Montreal, who has been assigned the task of selecting the Canadian representative, recently has conducted written tests for candidates in several cities. Seven of them (one Jew, three English and three French speaking Canadians) have reached the finals and will participate in an additional quiz in the form of a live radio broadcast which will take place during the Jewish Hour on radio station CFMB in Montreal next Sunday, June 14th, 12 noon.

The quiz, in Hebrew, French and English, will be conducted by Mr. N. Wilchesky, director of the Jewish hour, and Miss Colette Avital of the Israeli Consulate. Judges will be Monseigneur Irenee Lussier, rector of the University of Montreal, Justice Harry Batshaw, Rabbi Solomon Frank and Mr. Shlomo Weisman, principal of the Jewish People's School. Winner will officially be invited to Israel for the International Contest by Consul General David Z. Rivlin.

HALLELUJAH, WE HAD A CHECK-UP

by Ruthie

Nu, the Messiah is going to come — I finally was able to persuade my one-and-only to see a doctor. Not, God forbid, that there's anything wrong with him. I just felt that a routine check-up was in order.

Well, like every male, he'll consider a doctor only when he thinks he's, khuleelah (God forbid), dying. And that happens almost every day.

Ever see a man prick his finger? According to him, the pain is worse in intensity than a major operation.

They say a woman experiences changes. Well, I say you can't compare that with the fluctuating emotions of a man.

First of all, they're like infants. You know when a baby goes into a tantrum if it doesn't get its way. It may, maybe, puke all over the place, or turn blue in the face by holding its breath — anything to scare the daylights out of you.

So, my husband is just such a baby. Oh, he won't give way to nausea or hold his breath — meshooga (crazy) he's not. He has a gimmick all his own. He goes heavy on the dramatics by staggering and clutching his stomach:

"Ikh bin ah shvakher mentsch (I'm a weak man)! You want, I should have a heart attack?"

And why does he pick his stomach to clutch? It's really meant for his heart. But that tough organ is pushed someplace else to make room for the other. So, though his hands grope in the vicinity of his ticker, they land on his stomach.

And as he goes into the details of how weak he is, his voice, in contrast, rises. So it makes him mad when I calmly retort:

"You're weak? With that bass baritone? And if you are so sick, see a doctor."

Which advice, of course, gets us nowhere. All I could do is bide my time.

But if I complain, he says I never looked better.

The time arrived. We were at the doctor's. First it was his turn. He went through the usual: metabolism test, urine analysis, cardiogram — the works. Result? Negative.

"You mean, Doctor, there's nothing wrong with me?" You could feel his disappointment cutting the air, "Not one tiny bit of something wrong?"

After a split-second, Ned's eyes lit up. "Doctor, I forgot to tell you — I'm always burping."

Nu, so the way you are, I'm afraid you'll burp for the next hundred years."

Oh, I could have kissed my darling doctor right then and there. Now Ned would have to find another kind of tantrum.

Me? Of course, I must follow certain instructions. But, thank God, there's nothing the matter which isn't corrective. Still, I decided to make the most of the fact that I must take three kinds of pills a day.

"Doctor, do me a favor. I know there's nothing basically wrong. But tell Ned I'm a very sick woman.

"Why shouldn't I be petchket (pampered) a little? After ten years, I'm entitled."

He smiled. "Don't worry, leave it to me."

When it came time to discuss the prescriptions, Doctor said, "This one, Ned, is for you; these are for her."

My husband froze. "All that she's got to take? What's the matter with her?" The poor boy turned white.

Good, I thought. He loves me. Anyway, let him suffer a little.

"Well," my partner in conspiracy replied, "she's a little sick."

And with that cheerful remark, we bade him adieu.

The aftermath? Ned's as nice as pie.

"You know I love you even if I yell."

"Kids, mind your mother; she's not well."

I only hope he doesn't discover the fraud.

EAT AT ZOOLCH'S

where the waiters are awful!

I wonder where the Zoolch people get their waiters. They must recruit them from the Oxford Debating Society. Never have I met any body of men so anxious to dispute a decision. Just give a Zoolch waiter your order and you are in for a major discussion.

The most argumentative of the Zoolch staff is Max. A few days ago I ate lunch at Max's counter and ordered chopped steak.

"You had chopped steak last week," said Max. "Try something else."

"I know," I replied, "I had chopped steak last week. It was very good. And I want it again."

"Everything we serve is good," boasted Max. "Why order the same thing all the time? We're not specialists. We have calf's liver and onions today. I'll bring you some."

"No you won't," I almost shouted, "I don't like calf's liver."

"What's not to like about calf's liver?" asked Max. "You have a mere childish prejudice and you're carrying it into adult life. Try calf's liver."

By now my dander was up and I gave forth.

"Next week, Max, I will visit a psychiatrist and try to rid myself of liver phobia. But today — in fact, right now — I want chopped steak. Medium."

"Medium no less," spoke Max, more in sorrow than scorn. "O.K., Mister. It's your stomach. In this establishment we don't argue. The customer is always right, even if he's —"

I lost the last few words as Max turned and went through the swinging doors. I am sure that the muffled comment was not a compliment. I asked myself why do I have to put up with this? Am I really fascinated by Max's outrageous line? And why do I continue to eat lunch at Zoolch's Restaurant? Why is there always a line of people waiting for a seat?

The answer is plain. Wonderful food! Every dish that Zoolch's serves is tops — not just once or twice but always.

Mamma Zoolch is in charge of the kitchen and she does the buying. (Papa Zoolch is in charge of the so-called "personnel" and he takes the cash. Actually he is more interested in discussing world affairs with the customers.)

A friend of mine in the wholesale fruit and vegetable business tells me that when Mamma Zoolch comes in to buy, she drives everyone mad. (Her first name is Fanny; they all call her Fussy Fanny.) She examines every item she orders as if she were seeking diamonds for a monarch's crown. No wonder Mamma Zoolch's meals are so good! Quality seems to be a passion with her!

Come to think of it, in all the years I have been eating at Zoolch's, I have never seen any ketchup on the tables but Heinz. I once mentioned this fact to Mamma Zoolch.

"What did you expect?", she said, "If you eat at The Concord, whose ketchup do you see on the table? Heinz. If you eat at the Fontainebleau in Miami Beach, whose ketchup is served there? Only Heinz. If Heinz Ketchup is served in all the best hotels and the best restaurants of the world, why should Zoolch's be different? To save a few pennies? No, sir! Never! We may not be as fancy as all those places, but we're just as fussy".

Well spoken, Fussy Fanny! I like your formula for success. I shall continue to eat at Zoolch's. And maybe some day, Max will greet me as I sit at his counter and say:

"Good day, sir. May I be of service to you, sir?"

I can dream. Can't I?
